CHILD DIES OF INJURIES IN ACCIDENT

George Epley Fatally Hurt When Father's Car Leaves Road Near Fairfield.

NO INQUEST SET BY DR. MILLER

Injuries received Sunday evening when a car in which he and seven other persons were riding upset after being sideswiped on the Orrtanna-Fairfield road resulted fatally for George Robert Epley, six-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Epley, Gettysburg R. 9, near Two Taverns. The child died at the Warner hospital at 9:45 o'clock, Monday evening, of internal injuries and a probable fracture of the skull. An operation performed shortly after he was admitted to the hospital and a blood transfusion, Monday afternoon, failed to stem the lad's ebbing life.

The boy was one of eight occupants of the machine, who suffered injuries of a more or less serious nature as a result of the accident. The lad is said to have been standing in the rear seat when the machine was sideswiped and the driver, his father, lost control. The car turned over twice before coming to rest in a field.

According to state highway motor patrolman L. V. Bomgardner, who investigated the accident, Epley's machine was sideswiped by a car, driven by Ira Riggeal, Orrtanna, traveling in the same direction. A rear bumper of the Riggeal machine caught a hub cap on the front wheel of Epley's car, causing the driver to lose control.

Besides the victim, others injured in the crash were Mr. and Mrs. Epley, Hayward Epley, 12; Irma Grace Epley, 8; Mr. and Mrs. Preston Rudisill, Gettysburg, and their infant daughter, Pearl. All were given medical treatment at the office of Dr. Ira Henderson, Fairfield.

No Inquest Set
Dr. Edgar A. Miller, Adams county coroner, today said he has not yet set a time or place for holding an inquest into the child's death, nor has he named a jury to hear evidence and place responsibility.

Patrolman Bomgardner said he has not taken any action against Riggeal, pending the outcome of the coroner's inquest. Riggeal is at liberty on his own recognizance.

Besides his parents, the child is survived by one brother, Hayward, and one sister, Irma Grace, both at home, and his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Harlaub, Littlestown, and Mr. and Mrs. Milton Epley, Gettysburg R. 9.

Funeral Services
Brief funeral services from the house Thursday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock, with further services from Grace Lutheran church, Two Taverns. Interment in the cemetery adjoining the church.

Lieut. G. N. Pickering, of the state highway motor patrol, Harrisburg, was the speaker at the weekly meeting of the Rotary club at the Eagle hotel, Monday evening. He substituted for Capt. Wilson C. Price, superintendent of the patrol, who was unable to be present.

Lieutenant Pickering exhibited a pistol, rifle, hand machine gun, tear gas rifle, gas grenade and sawed off shot gun, weapons which he said the patrolmen fight with and against in their varied activities on Pennsylvania's highways.

The speaker outlined the course of instruction given recruits in the motor patrol at the training school at Harrisburg. He said, one of the first things a recruit is taught is courtesy toward motorists. The training course covers a three-month period of intensive work in a wide field of subjects, he said.

486 In Service
There are 486 patrolmen in service, each covering between 100 and 120 miles a day by motorcycle or other vehicle. Last year, the patrolmen made 48,000 arrests, he said, and also collected bad checks for the state department of revenue.

Lieutenant Pickering was accompanied to Gettysburg by Corporal W. B. Davies, of the training school. The three members of the local sub-station of the motor patrol, Patrolmen Ray Schwartz, Glenn S. Cox and L. V. Bomgardner also were guests of the Rotary club at the meeting.

Invitations to be represented at the conference have been extended to the different institutions throughout the state by Mrs. Mabel C. Wolcott, local librarian. The meeting will be divided, one session in the morning, and a second in the afternoon.

Taxicab Driver Robbed Of Automobile and $100 By Bandit Monday Night

Charles E. Weikert, Lured To Lonely Road, Stripped Of Trousers By Stranger At Point Of Pistol; Knots Pants And Escapes In Stolen Machine; Police Without Clues.

HIGHWAYMAN WELL ACQUAINTED WITH ROADS; DIRECTED DRIVER

After driving a stranger to a lonely spot on the back road from Gettysburg to Hunterstown, Monday evening, Charles E. Weikert, East Middle street, taxi driver, was held up at the point of a revolver, relieved of $100, stripped of his trousers and robbed of his automobile.

State police and motor patrolmen of Gettysburg, who were notified of the holdup and robbery shortly after it occurred were still without clues this afternoon as to the identity of the "pants bandit", or the direction in which he headed with the taximan's automobile.

Corporal E. J. Stroman, of the state police, who, with Troopers John E. Hobbs and Edward Walsh, investigated numerous leads in connection with the holdup and robbery during the night, today said the affair was one of the most cleverly planned and executed he had encountered in his police career.

Search in Maryland

The authorities expressed the opinion that after leaving Weikert at a point on the Hunterstown road, near the apple orchard of David Lott, the bandit doubled back to Gettysburg, and then headed toward Maryland. That the highwayman had knowledge of the roads in and around Gettysburg was indicated by the fact that he directed the taxi driver to a lonely spot on a little-traveled road to stage the daring holdup.

Within an hour after the state police received first word of the holdup, the high spots of the robbery, together with a description of the bandit, the license number and other information about Weikert's automobile were being broadcast throughout the state on the state police teletype system.

Describes Bandit
Weikert described the holdup man as being about 35 or 40 years old, weighing about 135 pounds and about five feet, eight inches tall. He wore a dark blue suit, light felt hat and gray mixed overcoat.

The stranger carried a hand bag and police said it was possible that he had another set of license plates probably from another state, with him, which he might put on his car after making good his escape.

Driver Careful
Later in the evening, a stranger, who came to Gettysburg on a transcontinental bus, asked William Shover, another taxi driver, to take him for a ride. Shover at first demurred, thinking that his fare might be the same holdup man who robbed Weikert, and he notified state police.

Shover took his passenger for a half hour's trip around Gettysburg, with state police following in another car, but nothing developed. State police also were called to investigate a report that an automobile had been abandoned along the Lincoln Highway, near Abbottstown, but when they reached the place, there was no machine around.

Occurred at 8
The holdup man first approached Weikert in center square shortly after 8 o'clock, Monday evening, when the taxi driver was talking with Mrs. John Blocher, Carlisle street. Robert Lee, Kendlehart apartments, Chambersburg street, was in the front seat of the Weikert machine when the stranger asked to be taken to the "Adams place."

Weikert's Story
Weikert's story of the affair follows:

"I was sitting in my car, parked at the taxi stand at the Eckert building, talking with Robert Lee, who was in the machine beside me, at about 8:10 o'clock, Monday evening. Mrs. John Blocher, Carlisle street, approached the car and asked me to drive her home.

"While I was standing outside holding the door open for Mrs. Blocher to enter the car, the stranger came across from the First National bank corner and entered the machine ahead of Mrs. Blocher, saying he wanted to go to the 'Adams' place. I thought he meant the Adams place above Bendersville, and I told him that Mrs. Blocher was going out the same way, after which she entered the car.

On Little Party
"I first drove to the Blue Parrot tea room for some rugs Mrs. Blocher had there, and then drove to Mrs. Blocher's home on Carlisle street. While I helped Mrs. Blocher take the rugs into the house, the hold-up man told Mr. Lee that he was going on a little party and did not want to have anyone else in the car with him. Mr. Lee got out and started to walk back to the square.

"With the stranger still in the rear seat, I started out the Biglerville road, but we had not gone far when my passenger said he wanted to go.

HEIGES URGES OBSERVANCE OF GOOD FRIDAY

Burgess C. A. Heiges this morning issued the following proclamation relative to the observance of Good Friday in Gettysburg:

"There has been called to my attention a desire for a more general observance of Good Friday. Banks have long observed Good Friday and there has been a tendency in recent years toward at least a partial observance in other lines of business. It has been suggested that stores and other places of business and amusement close their doors between the hours of 12 Noon, and 3 P. M. and thus promote attendance at religious worship or other fitting observance. It should be unnecessary to cite as justification the solemn import of the day throughout the Christian world.

"With these thoughts in mind, therefore, I, C. A. Heiges, Burgess of Gettysburg Borough, do ask the active co-operation of all citizens in an endeavor to secure observance, in the manner above mentioned, of Friday, April 18, as Good Friday, in the belief that the cultivation of the spiritual in our daily life is of benefit not only to the individual, but to the community."

BULLETS LACE BUCKNELL, 12-0

"Lefty" Haas Holds Bison To Four Hits While Mates Club Out An Even Dozen.

Orange and Blue Bullet bludgeons whistled out a swan song for two Bucknell flingers Monday afternoon on Nixon field and the Bison bowed in submission before Ira Plank's diamond cavorters, 12 to 0. It was the fourth straight victory for the Bullet warriors this year, Dartmouth, Villanova and Mt. St. Mary's succumbing before the attack of the Bullets.

The local warriors scored in their eight stanzas at the plate. Three markers breezed across the plate in the opening frame, one run was scored in the second and another in the third. The fourth frame saw two more tallies chalked up in favor of the Bullets and the next inning the men of Plank made it good measure by registering two more. In the sixth, seventh and eighth frames the Bullets pushed over three more runs, to bring their total to an even dozen.

Haas In Rare Form
Lefty Haas, smiling portside hurling ace of the Bullets, was in rare form. Despite the cold wet weather the Reading speedball artist burned 'em across the platter for five strikeouts and allowed four measly hits, three of which were garnered by Hinkle, high scoring football star of the Bison who plays the initial sack for the Lewisburg aggregation.

Eddie Gullian, Bullet second sacker, was the star with the willow for the Bullets. The Norristown athlete clubbed out four safe bingles in as many trips to the plate. Captain Davis starred afield with four runs, two hits, one putout and three assists. Every man on the Bullet team hit safely, except McMillan and Haas. Haas, however, was only accredited with one trip to the rubber. Several Bullet runs were due to costly errors on the part of the Bucknell performers, who made six miscues during the afternoon.

The Orange and Blue club will be idle until April 25, when Swarthmore comes here for the fifth battle of the season.

past the group of big buildings, and I believed he meant the county home buildings. At Howard avenue, I turned to the right to go over to the Harrisburg road, and at the Harrisburg road the stranger told me to turn to the left.

Knew His Way

"After traveling out the Harrisburg road, the stranger asked me to turn to the right at the Conrad refreshment stand, and when we reached the Hunterstown road, he again told me to bear to the left. He asked me if there was not a school house ahead of us on that road, and I told him there was. He seemed to know where he wanted to go and how to get there.

"Near the orchard on the farm of David Lott, the stranger leaned forward and said, 'I think I've made a mistake,' and with that he leaned over the front seat and shoved a pistol against my ribs.

Asks For Money

"Now, just how much money have you?" he asked, and I replied that I just had a little change.

"Commanding me to keep my hands on the steering wheel when I made a movement as though to reach for my pocketbook, the stranger got out of the car, and ordered me to walk to a telephone pole along the road.

"If you make a move or an outcry, I'll stick this 45 through you," he said, and I went along willingly. He asked me if I had a gun, and I told him I did not, whereupon he searched me, taking my wallet from a hip pocket and some change from another pocket.

Made Apologies

"I'm sorry I have to do this, but I need the money," he said as he pocketed the money. Again commanding me to make no outcry, he stranger got into the car and turned around on the narrow road. He then got out and came over to me and ordered me to take off my trousers. I obeyed, and he tied the legs into several knots and threw them into the orchard.

Before he made me remove my trousers, the stranger changed from a soft felt hat to a cap which he pulled down well over his eyes.

Threw Trousers Away

After throwing the trousers into the orchard, the stranger jumped into the car, the engine of which he had left running, and started off in the direction we had come.

News From Neighboring Counties

FREDERICK MAN IN DEATH LEAP OFF RIDGE

Frederick—George Randolph Legore, 45, widely known Frederick county man, committed suicide early Saturday by jumping from Legore bridge, a high arch structure spanning the Monocacy river near Frederick. His body was found Saturday lodged against a dam some distance down the stream.

Legore was well known in club and fraternal circles, and was a brother of the noted Harry Legore, former Yale football star.

Search for the body began with the finding of a note in his automobile parked along the bridge. The note referred to a recent illness and declared he could not stand the "agony" any longer and dared not tell his parents and brothers and sisters.

Legore was connected with the Legore Lime company, of which he was chairman of the board.

INVESTIGATE ATTEMPT TO DYNAMITE TRAIN

Hagerstown—Western Maryland railroad police are investigating the apparent attempt to wreck one of the company's fast freight trains west of Little Orleans Saturday morning when a dynamite explosion virtually demolished a gondola car and tore up the road bed beneath it, about 400 feet west of Indigo Tunnel.

Despite the damage, none of the cars were derailed and the explosion was not discovered until the train pulled into the local yards shortly after 3 o'clock Saturday morning. The bottom of the fifty-third car, the one in which the dynamite exploded, was torn to pieces and the road bed was badly damaged.

STUDENTS PUT OUT TWO FOREST FIRES

Waynesboro—Two forest fires in this section were quickly gotten under control by students of the state forest school under the direction of Forester Tom O. Bradley.

The first fire was discovered at Hayes run near the sanatorium. The fire burned over a tract of three acres before the students were able to get it under control.

Another alarm was sounded from the Caledonia section. This fire had eaten its way over a larger tract, but was soon under control.

In some cases new buildings are being planned. John Little, residing on the York road, is considering plans and specifications for a new two compartment milk house to be equipped with the most modern milk handling and cooling facilities.

PLEADS GUILTY BUT DENIES HE TOOK CAR

Chambersburg—Three Jewish brothers of Brooklyn set out early this year for California. One of them is in a hospital near Chicago with a fractured skull, the result of an automobile accident and another Hyman Leibowitz, appeared in court here Saturday to plead guilty to possessing an automobile which he said he did not steal. The other brother's whereabouts are unknown.

The plea of guilty was entered on behalf of Leibowitz by Harry M. Berkowitz, Philadelphia attorney, under the impression that the indictment carried a count of receiving stolen goods to which Leibowitz would have pleaded guilty because he was arrested at Philadelphia in possession of the car.

JACQUELINE ON HER OWN

by RICHARD STARR

SYNOPSIS: Teddy Montrose more and more occupies Jacqueline's thoughts and she is piqued by his neglect. A letter explains it; he loves her but feels his poverty is a barrier to asking her to become Mrs. Montrose. It awakens in Jacqueline a realization she loves him but she has known all along she could not marry him. The persistent Mr. Carew calls again with word that Mrs. Mason is in the country and wants to see her. Jacqueline consents to accompany him. After a series of "accidents" the car stops on a lonely road and Mr. Carew catches Jacqueline in his arms and forcibly kisses her, protesting his love for her.

Chapter 26

LOSING CARDS

Jacqueline was taken completely unawares, because of all things this was the last she had expected. Though she struggled gamely, she was powerless against Carew's strength. But she kept on fighting blindly, pressing her face down to escape his wild kisses.

She was not frightened, only amazed and angry. All the while she was thinking of Teddy Montrose who had told her that he loved her. She had a queer feeling that she was defending his honor more than her own.

Her shoulder was pressed against the side of the car. Her left arm was free, and reaching behind her she felt the steering wheel and the little button of the electric horn. She pressed it and held it down.

The awful and prolonged screech of the horn did its work. It so shook the nervous system of Mr. Carew that after some 30 seconds of it he released her and stood away suddenly.

"I'm sorry, Jacqueline," he muttered. "I forgot myself. I love you and I allowed my feelings to run away with me."

"Where are we?" demanded Jacqueline fiercely. "Tell me."

"I don't know."

"You do know. You know perfectly well. I believe all this has been planned. This is a good car, and no good car could have so many things go wrong with it in one afternoon and evening."

"This is real trouble at any rate," he said. "The car has stopped, and I don't know why it has stopped this time."

"Then the other accidents were planned?"

"Yes," he replied with a shrug. "You may as well know the truth. You are at least 45 miles from London and some 10 miles from the nearest railway station. That is the main line. There is a branch line somewhere about here, but the last train went an hour ago or more. I wrote that letter from Mrs. Porter Mason. I don't know where Mrs. Mason is and I don't care. I wanted to get you out here to myself, that is all."

Jacqueline felt no fear—only anger.

"What for?" she demanded.

"I've told you, Jacqueline. Because I love you and I want to marry you."

"Do you think you are going to win my love this way? You've got a strange idea of love-making."

"I tried to win it by fair means and failed. Now I am going to try the other way."

"I suppose this is what is called the caveman way," returned Jacqueline.

"I don't know anything about that. It is my way."

"Well, it hasn't worked very well up to now, has it? What are you proposing to do next, mister villain?"

"Either you consent to marry me, Jacqueline, or I will hand you over to the police. I happen to know you are the woman wanted in connection with the theft of the diamond necklace from Circo's club."

Jacqueline laughed contemptuously. "So that's the best you can do, is it? That's your masked battery. Well, take me along. A detective already has questioned me and is perfectly satisfied with my story."

Mr. Carew looked dashed, but pulled himself together. "The other alternative remains," he said.

"What alternative?"

"Here we are, stranded miles from anywhere, as I intended we should be. Even the fog I arranged. We are close to the Essex mud flats, and at this time of the year there is nearly always a night-fog in this district. We cannot possibly get away from here until tomorrow, by which time your good name will be hopelessly compromised."

Jacqueline laughed whole-heartedly. "You make me think of that play I saw the other day. Are all Americans as beautifully old-fashioned as you? Don't you know that this way of getting a girl compromised went out in 1914. If I don't return to my rooms at the Majestic until tomorrow, who is there to fret about it? The hotel proprietors?"

"Your relatives," suggested Carew. "I have none, or none who have troubled anything about me since I was 14."

"Your friends, then?"

"I have none."

"I think there is one," said Carew. "Indeed, then you know more than I do."

"What about Mr. Montrose?"

Jacqueline slipped all of a sudden to the grass by the road side. At first Carew thought she had merely sat down. But when he went nearer he saw that she was lying out with her eyes closed, her lips slightly parted, and her face very white.

"Fainted," he thought.

Which was exactly what Jacqueline meant him to think.

It was a most alarming faint. Jacqueline lay perfectly still; her face was very white, her little flower-like mouth slightly open and her hands clenched.

Mr. Carew set to work to revive her, but his experience at this art was limited. He opened her clenched hands with difficulty and chafed them. This produced no result whatever, and as soon as he released the little hands they closed again as tightly as before.

The only other restorative he knew of was water. Fortunately for Jacqueline there was no water available, only what was in the radiator of the car.

After a quarter of an hour of frantic effort on his part, Jacqueline looked if possible nearer to death than ever, and Mr. Carew, full of horrible fears, was in a state of panic.

If only he could get some water or some help. If only he could find a woman—any sort of woman would do. Women knew how to deal with these matters. All he knew was that a faint ought not to last 20 minutes.

In the midst of his unhappy reflections there rose on the still night air the distant squawking of a pack of geese. Where there were geese there must be some sort of a house.

Quickly he lifted the limp Jacqueline in his arms into the back of the car and propped her in the corner of the seat. The grotesque attitude into which she collapsed when he took his hands away was ghastly.

In a perspiration of fear he fled down the road.

No sooner had the fog swallowed him than the grotesque and collapsed figure in the back of the car calmly sat up.

"That was a pretty good faint, though I say it myself," remarked Jacqueline. "But how was I to know he would feel my pulse? I ask you! Anyway, I couldn't have done anything about that. A girl can't stop her pulse. I think Mr. Carew has had the fright of his young life. Ugh! The beast! Oh, Teddy, why aren't you here, my dear, to throw him over the hedge like you did those men in the flat?"

She shuddered. "That man Carew is a bad lot, but he hasn't beaten little Jacqueline yet. Oh, how I hate him for pawing me like that. When he was rubbing my hands I wanted to scream. The only thing I was afraid of was that he would kiss me again. But I guess he was too frightened for that. If he had I should have bitten him. Ugh—those kisses! But a girl doesn't need to worry much about kisses of that sort. They wash off."

She did not lose time while she was indulging in these reflections. She was out of the car in a second and speeding down the road in the opposite direction to the one Carew had taken.

FOUR FIRES ON SOUTH MOUNTAIN

Danger Over Early Today After Burning Acres Of Forest Lands.

Fed by timber as dry as tinder and spread by gentle winds, four forest fires raged in the South Mountain over the week-end.

Late Sunday night three of them had been extinguished and the other was yet to be brought under control.

The nearest and most dangerous of the blazes burned on the Washington county and Frederick county side of South Mountain between Ponds-ville and Black Rock. Smoke coming from this direction was discovered early Sunday afternoon by Miss Willard, the observer at the Foxville fire tower.

Sends Alarm

She sent out the alarm to Fire Warden Charles Bruner at Ponds-ville and to Fire Warden Roy H. Harshman at Myersville, and they gathered up a crew of about fifty men and set out to start back fires. It was found that the conflagration was over an area of uninhabited mountain forest land.

The nearest house was that of John E. Swope at the edge of Ponds-ville. This structure was about two miles away when the blaze was first discovered.

No Real Danger

The wind was blowing in the direction of the house, and the flames came somewhat nearer before the wind died down and the inhabitants received word that there was no danger. The blaze was extinguished about 12:30 a. m. Sunday after burning over about 100 acres.

A smaller forest fire had previously broken out, again from undetermined origin, near Foxville, about noon Sunday. This one, however, being near to the station and easily discovered, was seen before it attained any appreciable magnitude and was put out without any trouble.

The blend that revolutionized smoking

THE INCOMPARABLE BLEND of Camel Cigarettes is probably the most important discovery in the history of smoking. It made cigarette smoking popular. Camel changed the smoking habits of the nation and has given pleasure to more millions of people than any other cigarette.

This exclusive blend assures in Camel a smoothness, a mildness and a mellow fragrance that cannot be imitated. It preserves all the excellent qualities of the choice tobaccos of which Camels are made and melds them all together into a delightful harmony of smoke pleasure. It sets Camel apart as a cigarette of distinctive character and provides for Camel smokers the very highest form of smoking luxury.

McGibeny Family: The entertainment of the famous McGibeny family, in McClellan's Opera House on Friday night, can be relied on as a first class one. Our exchanges uniformly speak in the highest terms of them. At Lewistown, Pa., last week the Pastors of the different churches united with prominent citizens in requesting a repetition of the entertainment in that place.
Last week the remains of the dead were removed from the lot recently purchased by the county commissioners adjoining the county jail. The lot was formerly used as a burying ground for the Lutheran and Reformed churches. The dead were removed to the old burial lot on which the Reformed church stands. The work was done under the superintendence of Mr. Samuel Herbst.

Paxton H. Riley, Esq., of Liberty township, left on Monday last for Keyser, Virginia, with upwards of forty hands and two four-horse teams, where he has contracted to peel and deliver to the railroad at that place from 800 to 1,000 cords of bark. He had baked up in bread before starting nearly three barrels of flour for his little family.
The Hanover Spectator says that last week while Samuel Forney, assisted by some workmen, was engaged in making a fence between one of his fields and lands of Mr. Rufus A. Eichelberger, a short distance south of Grove Lane and at the borough line, in excavating for a post hole, at a depth of some three feet from the surface, he came upon the complete skeleton of an Indian, in a remarkable state of preservation. Tradition says that in 1764 the ground in that neighborhood was used as a place of burial for the few Indians remaining about Hanover.

Little Jack Rabbit

By David Cory

Now, let me see, or, rather, remember, what the little rabbits were doing when we ended the last story. Oh, yes, now I recall, they had just filled a big basket with lollipops and were on their way back to Uncle Lucky's little red shingled house on the corner of Lettuce Avenue and Carrot Street, when all of a sudden, they had an adventure. Yes, indeed, and it came so quickly, just like that, swift as the kind that blows off your hat, that they had no time to stop the Luckymobile; and, oh, dear me! it ran straight into a bumble bee's nest. Dear me, again, for this is the second time I've said it, and

THE GOOD LIFE

Oh, whether you dwell in a cottage or a castle on top of a hill, There are hunger and thirst of the spirit that are certain to follow you still.

There is pain that you can't get away from, and loss that you'll have to endure.

For life doles out anguish and heartaches which money and fame cannot cure.

Oh, whether you're master or toiler, or rich man or poor 'tis the same.

You'll never know joy if you're friendless; you'll never be happy in shame.

Food hunger seems trifling compared with the hunger of men for respect.

For there's nothing that fortune can offer to pay for the name that is wrecked.

Oh, the good life is building on courage and honor and kindness and cheer.

It gathers its friends where it finds them and clings to them year after year.

And whether in cottage or castle the true man may chance to abide

There shall come those dark days of disaster when he must have a friend at his side.

once more! the bees were so angry that they flew out of their house and stung Uncle Lucky's old wedding stovepipe hat. The next minute they stung the old gentleman rabbit's left ear and the little bunny's pink nose.

"Gracious me!" exclaimed unhappy Uncle Lucky, "my ear is beginning to feel mighty queer, and your nose, Bunnikins, is beginning to swell!" Just then all four tires made a strange, hissing noise. Those dreadful bees had stung the rubber and let out all the air! Wasn't that perfectly scandalous! Well, I should say so!

"Let's get away from here or we'll be stung to death," shouted Uncle Lucky. And they hopped, clipperty clip, lipperty lip, and lucky, with never a stumble or slip. On reaching the Bubbling Brook, the wise old gentleman placed cool, soft mud on his left ear and a mud plaster on his little nephew's nose. Pretty soon, by and by, although it seemed quite long, the two little rabbits felt less pain.

"Watch out for a bees' nest, It's full of dreadful stings, Whose buzzy owners whirl about On gauzy, nimble wings.— Then slyly creep beneath your collar And make you dance about and hol-ler."

exclaimed the old gentleman in poetry.

"What are we going to do about the Luckymobile," asked the little bunny, "if we leave it here we'll have to hop home!"

"I wouldn't venture near it without a gas mask," chuckled Uncle Lucky.

"Let's hop down to the Bunny Scout Armory; there are gas masks there," suggested the little rabbit.

"Bright idea," laughed the old gentleman rabbit, and off he set, clipperty clip, lipperty lip, and after him hopped the little bunny, hip-perty hip, his knapsack bouncing up and down on his back and his red striped candy cane swinging from his left paw. After a while and many a mile and a swollen smile due to the stings of those dreadful bees, the Armory came in sight.

"Well, here we are," sighed Uncle Lucky. "Now let's see where the masks are kept." As soon as he had found them, they both started right back for the bumble bee place with the masks over their faces. "Gracious meebus!" at length exclaimed the old gentleman rabbit, "I declare, my face is all perspiration, I've got to take off this awful mask."

"We had better carry them in our paws," suggested the little bunny. "We don't need to wear them until we get near to the bees' place," and in the next story you shall hear what happened after that.

SUNDOWN STORIES

THE AMUSED SKY

By Mary Graham Bonner

They stayed at the tops of the skyscraper looking out over the city while the Little Black Clock told the story that had amused him.

"I heard it only yesterday," he said. "Word came to me through one of the clocks in the house.

This clock had heard some news from the sky. It seemed the sky had been very much amused in the first place when the people on the earth had started building what they called skyscrapers.

"Of course in those days they were not like the skyscrapers of today. They began in a small way. But they were tall buildings compared to the buildings of an age before, and so they seemed quite high.

"Now people say that these great, towering, high buildings are indeed skyscrapers—and it is that that amuses the sky.

"What! the sky was heard to have said. "What! They call these building skyscrapers, meaning they almost scrape the sky because they are so close to me!

INDIGESTION GOES-QUICKLY PLEASANTLY

When you begin to suffer from heartburn, gas or indigestion, it's usually the fault of too much acid in your stomach. The best way—the quickest way—to stop your trouble is with Phillips Milk of Magnesia. A spoonful in water neutralizes many times its volume in stomach acids—and does it instantly. The symptoms disappear in five minutes.

You will never use crude methods when you know Phillips Milk of Magnesia. And you will never allow yourself to suffer from over-acidity again. It is the standard anti-acid with doctors and has been for over fifty years.

Your drug store has Phillips Milk of Magnesia, in generous 25c and 50c bottles. Full directions for its many uses in every package. Insist on the genuine. A less perfect product may not act the same. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered trade mark of the Chas. H. Phillips Chemical Co., and its predecessor Chas. H. Phillips, since 1875.—adv.

Millions in Special Taxes

The buyers of insurance in the United States indirectly but actually contribute a vast sum—approximately $80,000,000 annually—through taxes additional to the regular taxes paid by insurance companies in common with other lines of industry. This money is a burden upon the premium of the policyholder, notwithstanding it is collected from the company.

The original purpose of special taxes upon insurance was to maintain state supervision of the business, but such supervision uses but four cents of each dollar, and the balance—about $77,000,000—goes into the general funds of the states.

These special taxes of the state and the taxes which insurance companies pay in common with all other business concerns, and owners of property, as well as their substantial taxes to the Federal Government, are factors in the cost of fire insurance.

The Chamber of Commerce of the United States has adopted the following resolution:

"... Special State Taxes now levied on Policyholders through insurance companies should not be considered as a source of general revenue, but should be reduced to the total in each state which will adequately support such state's departmental supervision"

The Stock Fire Insurance companies, which transact by far the greater portion of the fire insurance business of the country, want you to realize this condition and its effect upon the cost of your fire insurance.

BUSINESS MAN ENTHUSIASTIC ABOUT KONJOLA

Well-Known Resident of Kennett Square Eager To Tell What New Medicine Did For Him.

MR. ARTHUR B. MARTIN

"I welcome this opportunity to tell what Konjola did me," said Mr. Arthur B. Martin, 219 South Broad street, Kennett Square, near West Chester. "A long and serious illness left me with a badly impaired stomach. The plainest food soured soon after eating and I bloated and belched until heartburn and heart palpitation became serious. I had little or no appetite and was losing weight and strength. I became discouraged and unfit for my work as plumbing contractor."

"It required just four weeks for this great medicine to restore me to better health than I had known in years. I have an excellent appetite and am gaining steadily in weight, strength and vitality. I am no longer troubled with sour stomach, bloating or belching and heart-palpitation, shortness of breath and headaches are a thing of the past. I can never say enough in praise of Konjola and I certainly urge all sufferers to give this great medicine a fair trial."

Konjola works with the important functional organs of the body. It drives the poisons from the system, regulates the organs of elimination, and produces glorious and abundant relief. Konjola should be taken from six to eight weeks in order to attain the best results.

Konjola is sold in Gettysburg, Pennsylvania, at Murphy's Cut Rate drug store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.
